Why Do Malleable Ranges Rust Out?

A Malleable Range Salesman asked himself this question and found that the outer walls rusted through from the inside. "How could they rust from the inside?"

All ranges are lined with asbestos to hold the heat. When this asbestos cools it absorbs moisture from the air circulating through the range and this asbestos sweats on the outside like a pitcher of water.

As the asbestos is clamped tight against the outer wall this wall is attacked by rust which dangerous. To put on a new wall costs as much as a new range.

Sweaty Asbestos
"As it is the sweat from the asbestos that rusts the wall, the asbestos should not touch the wall," this salesman reasoned.

Four Ply Wall of the COPPER-CLAD RANGE

"What is it that will not rust?" "Gold, silver, copper—copper? Why not a sheet of copper between the asbestos and walls?" he reasoned.

He organized a Company to make ranges. He put a pure copper sheet between the asbestos and body. He made "bosses"—big circular dents in a dead air space next to the copper sheets—that provided body and no range so built has ever rusted. He named his range the Copper-Clad because "the rust points are clad with copper."

We are agents for the Copper-Clad Range and invite you to see this, the finest Range made.

Vote the Republican Ticket

The Democratic Platform of 1912, referring to the Republican party said:

"We take issue with them on this subject and charge that excessive prices result in a large measure from the high tariff laws enacted and maintained by the Republican party and from trusts and commercial conspiracies fostered and encouraged by such laws, and we assert that no such substantial relief can be secured for the people until import duties on the necessities of life are materially reduced and these criminal conspiracies broken up."

Yet the Underwood Tariff bill was passed by the Democratic party and flour is $10.30 a barrel and coal is $7.00 per ton, and everything has increased in proportion, thus showing that the Democrats have not reduced the high cost of living.

Vote for Hughes so that we may be prosperous after the close of the European War.

Vote for Governor Willis who rescued you from the iniquitous Warnes' Law, thus permitting you to elect your own assessors.

Vote for the district, county and judicial ticket for they are honest, capable and efficient.

THE SPOKESMAN OF REACTION

The longer Judge Hughes remains on the stump in pursuit of the presidency the clearer the fact becomes that the judge is a candidate of reaction, and that his election in November would be a triumph of reaction.

All the old voices of standstillism, supposedly forever stilled, are shrieking in chorus for the judge's election. All the old reactionary influences, repeatedly discredited and put to rout, are once more united and militant behind the former justice of the supreme court.

It is as if Judge Hughes during his six years upon the supreme bench had closed his mind to all progress, had been ignorant of what was going on in the United States and the world at large during these half dozen years, and had now re-entered the world of active politics with all the impressions of 1910 still in control of his mind. The world has moved in six years. Judge Hughes shows no evidence of progress.

Things have been happening in the United States since 1910, when Judge Hughes went to the supreme court. American political life has undergone a revolution. The strongholds of privilege have been besieged, captured and destroyed. Mark Hannan is but a memory. Wall Street no longer controls the credits of the nation. Tariff beneficiaries are no longer looked upon as the rightful authority when tariff schedules need alteration.

But all this makes no impression upon the judicial mind of Justice Hughes. The period between 1910 and 1916, so far as he is concerned, accomplished nothing. The world stood still.

So it comes about naturally that the candidacy of Judge Hughes is backed by the forces of reaction that held sway prior to 1910. So it happens logically that privilege represented by Wall Street and the army, to elect Judge Hughes and defeat President Wilson, who above any other American stands for the new order in politics and business.

Mark Hanna is dead, but Penrose still lives. Aldrich has gone, but Smoot is here. Death and pestilence have taken some of the apostles of standstillism but the spirit of their discredited cause is kept alive. And with one accord these latter day saints of privilege sing the praises of Hughes.

Four years ago Theodore Roosevelt was touring the country denouncing the "burglars" who had deprived him of the Republican nomination at Chicago. Today he is urging the people of the United States to return these identically same "burglars" to the seats of power at Washington.

The party of Hughes is precisely the same as the party of Taft in 1912, with the addition of some pseudo-Progressives who believe their protestations of four years ago by supporting with tongue, pen and money the "burglars" they then pledged their honor and their lives to destroy. If the men who nominated Taft four years ago were able to receive the endorsement of the American people, as Roosevelt solemnly declared, they are equally untoday.

Boise Penrose is the same Boise Penrose now as he was when he helped nominate Mr. Taft. Reed Smoot is no less a cynic than he was as a Hughes general than he was as a Taft general in 1912. Elihu Root is no better now than he was then. Murray Crane has not reformed. Neither has Gallinger, Barnes or Fordney.

It is the same old crowd trying to put over the same old game of deception. Nominated by such a reactionary group and backed by the money they are able to levy, it is not surprising that Judge Hughes must needs talk in meaningless platitudes and hide his program—if he has one—in torrents of words denunciatory of the president of the United States.

The election of Hughes would mean the rehabilitation of Penrose, of Smoot and Root, of Gallinger, Warren and Crane. The judge speaks for reaction, for exploitation and privilege. So far as the evidence of his speeches go, the last six years are represented in his mind as a blank—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CONCERNING CONTEMPT

There are those who think—or pretend to think—that the United States is "displeased" and "held in contempt" by the European belligerents. If that be the case, the European neutrals would love most dearly to receive a share of the same contempt, manifested in the same way.

When the U-53 made her raid off the coast of New England, she stopped an American ship, but the moment the nationality of that ship was established the German commander let go as if he had grabbed the wrong end of a poker. On the other hand, he sunk a Dutch ship and a Norwegian one—both neutrals—without hesitation or compunction; and now, German submarines have established a virtual blockade of the south Norwegian coast, sinking everything in sight that carries the Norwegian flag. Danish vessels have received similar treatment, and the merchants of Holland complain bitterly that they must suffer the losses of war without the satisfaction of hitting back.

Contempt for the United States? Tell it in Amsterdam or Copenhagen, or Christiania. The people there would be glad to pay a high price for being displeased that way.

Harding's Tribute to Pomerene
On a Tuesday afternoon last April, when there was no political campaign on, United States Senator Warren G. Harding paid tribute to a group of business men in Canton, the home city of United States Senator Atlee Pomerene, made this frankly complimentary observation:

"I am a Republican, but I can say of Senator Pomerene that he is one of the trusted men of the Senate. If all Democratic members measured up to his standard, this country would be a great deal better off. And I might add that if all Republicans had as much sense as he, the country would be still better off."

In the midst of a campaign it is sometimes well to recall just what a candidate's political opponents really think of him. Senator Harding's estimate of Senator Pomerene in his Canton address last April is a better guide to independent thinking Republicans now than the partisan misrepresentations made by those who, in their efforts to defeat the senior Senator for reelection, are throwing dust in the voters' eyes.

State Representative Candidate.

To Voters and Taxpayers:
There will be three State Representatives to elect in November instead of two as formerly and I think that the third man should be from the country instead of having all three from Youngstown. I am serving my second term as Trustee of Coitsville township and am the only candidate from the country for that office. I think we should get together regardless of party and elect a country candidate for Representative. I will appreciate your support and influence.

Respectfully,
HENRY YOUNG,
Candidate for Representative
